The Fort Monroe correspondent of the Atlantic City says:

the regulars' quarters states that on Tuesday night about 10 o'clock a company of the First Delaware Regiment left Camp Hamilton for a reconnaissance expedition. The corps was under command of Captain Watson, of Wilmington. They went to the Hampton creek, and when about 12 1/2 miles from their outer pickets, encountered a considerable force of cavalry, who were accompanied by a few foot soldiers. The cavalry was so confident that the Delaware company had reached an enemy's position or near approach was the ring of the projectiles through the woods as derisive. Capt. Watson threw up a ton of shot in the brushwood and then after riding to an oblique position, he ordered his reinforcements. General Mansfield, with his three companies of the New York Tenth, Col. Max Weber, proceeded to the relief of the Delaware boys. At the time that the relief Fortres Moore, neither the Delaware relief had been definitely heard from though it was the current that the formation suffered a loss of a company.

The burning of the principal part of the town of Warsaw is confirmed by gentlemen who arrived from that vicinity this evening. The business portion of the town, consisting of a large block and several smaller ones, was flames when the gentleman left. The buildings scattered, it is probable that nearly all the residences were destroyed. The Quartermaster and Commissary Departments were located in the same block, but a greater portion of the Government stores had been removed. It is supposed the work of accessories. The troops who were there at the time were on the march to Suva, and left the morning following the fire, which occurred on Thursday.

Latest via Sedalia.—The town was fired at six o'clock Thursday evening. Nearly business prison is in ashes. The troops were stationed there left at about eight and are now here. A portion of the Commission stores, for which we had no transportation, were destroyed by the fire. The fire was fired by order of the commanding officer. I thought by the commanding officer that the fire was fired by citizens, as men dressed in civilian clothes were seen coming from the building which the fire originated.

SUNDAY NIGHT'S DESPATCH

WASHINGTON, Nov.

A few weeks ago the Secretary of War authorized General Wood to ascertain whether civil and other articles necessary to the comfort citizens, low prisoners of war, could be sent to them. The following letter shows that consent has been given for that purpose.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NORFOLK
November 9th, 1861

SIR: I consider myself fully authorized to reply at once to the enquiry made in your letter of the 8th instant. My government will send blankets and articles of clothing necessary for the comfort of prisoners of war to be sent to them. Any such articles as you may send will be promptly forwarded to the prisoners. Express Company, and money may be sent to the freight, hard or it may be paid on delivery.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
[Signed] BENJAMIN HUGGEE
Major General Commanding Department

The Quartermaster General of the United States will provide blankets and clothing for prisoners of war and forward them through Gen. Wool, in accordance with the terms of the agreement from Gen. Huger. It is further ascertained that this arrangement has been accomplished with the Government in any relative manner.

No parties transpired further than that the rebel battery fled with spirit, but was finally silenced. Cambridge is said to have received one shot.

FORTRESS MONROE, Nov.
Last evening the gunboats Cambridge and Huetzel proceeded up York river some distance and at half past ten opened a hot fire of shot and shell against the rebel camps at Warwick. The attack was unexpected as little resistance was made. Between 40 and 50 shells were fired and the camps entirely demolished. The amount of the rebel force is not known. The rebels were taken by surprise and a large number of boats were left on the river. Gen. Mansfield assumed command at Newport News in place of Gen. Phelps.

Col. Weber is appointed to Camp Hamilton.
